A SEMI-MONTHLY UPDATE ON COMMUNITY MENTAL HEALTH IN NEW YORK

DMH Y2K contingency plan

Despite the City's confidence in its Y2K preparations, the Department of Mental Health, mental Retardation and Alcoholism Services has put a contingency plan into place. During December 1999 the Office of Fiscal Services will process a supplemental advance payment, equal to 1/24th of the adjusted net contract budget, to voluntary agencies under contract with DMHMRAS. This, along with the half month's advance included in the first advance payment agencies received, will provide a one month cash flow.

In addition, the Office of Fiscal Services will process the payment of contract funds pertaining to the October 1999 monthly fiscal summary before the January 1, 2000 due date. Agencies that have not yet submitted the monthly fiscal summary document due November 30, 1999 are encouraged to do so immediately. Contact Larry M. Morales at (212) 219-5400 if you have any questions. ▣

Surgeon General releases landmark study

On December 13th, 1999 U.S. Surgeon General Dr. David Satcher released what is sure to become a landmark study of mental health, mental illness and mental health care in America. In nearly 460 pages Dr. Satcher makes a case so compelling that it will be nearly impossible to ignore.

The statistics with which Dr. Satcher leads off the report should focus attention from the start. Nearly one in five Americans is affected by a mental disorder in any given year. About 15% of all adult Americans, and 21% of the children and adolescents use mental health services in a given year. Direct costs of mental health services in America total nearly $100 billion per year and indirect costs reach nearly $80 billion. In the U.S. mental disorders account for more than 15% of the overall burden of disease, more than all forms of cancer combined. Worldwide, only cardiovascular conditions cost more years of lost healthy life than mental illness.

SURGEON GENERAL'S WARNING:
Stigma against mental illness can be harmful to you and everyone else.

Dr. Satcher makes very clear what we in the mental health community have long understood; that the stigma associated with mental illness is "an excuse for inaction and discrimination that is inexcusably outmoded in 1999." Disturbing though is his debunking of the notion that a better understanding of mental illness will lead to a concurrent decline in stigma. Despite a greater understanding of mental illness and its causes, "the perception of people with psychosis as being dangerous is stronger today than in the past." All this despite the fact that, "the overall contribution of mental disorders to the total level of violence in society is exceptionally small."

Dr. Satcher also makes clear what the costs of stigma are. "Nearly two-thirds of all people with diagnosable mental disorders do not seek treatment," and one of the primary barriers is stigma. Stigma also affects the public's willingness to fund mental health care. While 15% of the burden of disease results from mental disorders, less than 10% of the health care dollars are invested in treatment for mental illness, and the percentage has declined over the last decade.

Chapters in the report include:

- The Fundamentals of Mental Health and Mental Illness, which includes sections on multiculturalism, consumer and family movements and recovery.
- Children and Mental Health
- Adults and Mental Health
- Older Adults and Mental Health
- Organizing and Financing Mental Health Services
- Confidentiality of Mental Health Information: Ethical, Legal and Policy Issues
- A Vision for the Future, which includes sections entitled:
 - Continue to Build the Science Base
 - Overcome Stigma
 - Improve Public Awareness of Effective Treatment
 - Ensure the Supply of Mental Health Services and Providers
 - Ensure Delivery of State-of-the-Art Treatments
 - Tailor Treatments to Age, Gender, Race, and Culture
 - Facilitate Entry Into Treatment
 - Reduce Financial Barriers to Treatment

We applaud Dr. Satcher and this administration for their efforts to bring mental health and mental illness to the forefront. No other Surgeon General or administration has been as clear and consistent a voice for people with mental illness as these. We await with tremendous anticipation the policy and funding changes that will be the natural outgrowth of a report of this magnitude, including complete behavioral health care parity, sufficient funding of existing mental health services, increases in system-wide capacity for adults as well as children and adolescents, aggressive campaigns to combat stigma, programs to cover the uninsured and adequate funding for research into the causes of and cures for mental illness. □

Responding to the Daily News

Although the Daily News failed to publish the letter Coalition Executive Director Phillip A. Saperia sent in the wake of their editorial push for re-institutionalization, they did publish a letter from Treasurer Peter Campanelli. We reprint that letter here for those who missed it:

Manhattan: I found your November 28 editorial "Put balance in mental health" to be a valiant attempt to explain and solve a very complicated problem - although it fell far short of the mark. The problem we face in providing service in communities to adults who are seriously mentally ill is years of misdirecting massive funds to state hospitals and acute-care centers when 95% of seriously mentally ill people are in communities.

In our booming economy, it is hard to imagine that we cannot find the wherewithal to provide services to our children to help them grow into productive adults and also help those who are adults live safely in the communities of their choice.

As treasurer and board member of the Coalition of Voluntary Mental Health Agencies, I can say that it is not a union of mental health workers, but rather a federation of agencies whose common mission is to ensure that the city's mental health system is accessible and appropriately responsive.
